

New Complex To Be Called C. H. Goppert Fine Arts Center

The C. H. Goppert Fine Arts Center at Avila College will serve the community as well as the academic needs of the college.

Official announcement has just been made of the naming of the fine arts center at Avila. It will be called the C. H. Goppert Fine Arts Center in recognition of the substantial gift donated by the Goppert Foundation to make this building a reality.

Present plans call for the beginning of construction of this building in 1971. It will provide a structure for business, industry, civic and social events as well as for the centralization of facilities for music, drama and art at Avila College. At present, facilities of the fine arts department are dispersed in several buildings.

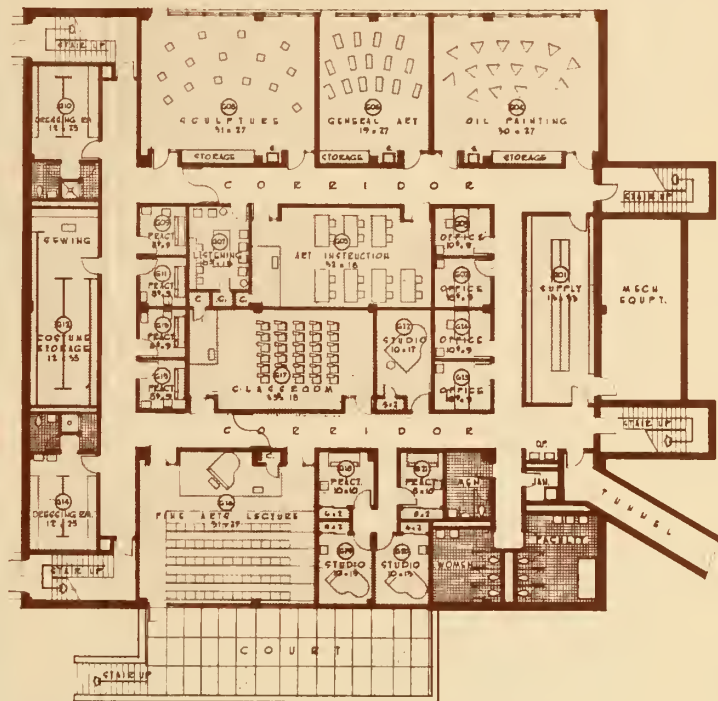

The new building will offer adequate facilities for the further development of the fine arts program for which Avila is becoming increasingly well known. It will provide studios as well as performance, exhibit, and lecture areas. The theatre, which will be the central feature of the fine arts center, will serve an educational function. It will also be available for civic and cultural events. In south Kansas City such a center is greatly needed.

The Avila Action in Arts Fund campaign which began officially in September, 1968, will continue until December, 1969. The contribution given by the Goppert Foundation is a part of this drive. The various sections of the drive are raising their percentages daily. Several have already achieved one hundred per cent. It is expected that by the end of the year, the drive will have achieved its total goal.

Coach Lamp Apartments for Seniors

The construction of the second residence hall at Avila College has been halted by the building strike in Kansas City. The college had been counting on this building for the incoming resident students. The Randall Kelly Construction Company had agreed that at least one floor would be ready for occupancy in September, 1969. Then came the strike.

Nothing daunted, Avila has thought of a way. To provide adequate facilities for the students, the college has leased 17 units of the Coach Lamp Apartments at Red Bridge. These are new two bedroom apartments with living room, kitchen and patio. Seniors and juniors have been presented a choice of living in these apartments with four girls to a unit for the school year 1969-1970. Both students and parents are pleased with this arrangement.
